

Have you ever wondered what went on at the Poole Royal Ordnance Factory in Sopers
Lane, Creekmoor, during and after the war?

A publication has just been written by David Warhurst detailing the history of the ROF at Creekmoor which also contains photographs and illustrations and is to my knowledge the only publication related solely to the Poole Royal Ordnance Factory.

The factory was built in 1940 and employed over 2,000 people during the war years. The ROF finally closed in 1958 but the site remains and is currently mainly occupied by Siemens.

The book can be purchased at a cost of £5, by contacting the author on 01202 696295. (P&P if required £2)
