Recorded Books Partners with BenchPrep to Bring Test-Preparation Resource to Public Libraries

Prince Frederick, MD – March 4, 2014 – Recorded Books has announced a partnership with BenchPrep to provide public libraries with interactive courses that help students and adults master GED tests, high school AP course exams, graduate entrance exams and industry certifications.

“We are excited to partner with Recorded Books to help students and adults work toward their college and career aspirations,” said Ashish Rangnekar, BenchPrep co-founder. “At BenchPrep, we strive to create educational tools that are highly engaging and provide personalized learning to every student. Through this partnership, students will have access to a wide variety of high-quality courses anytime, anywhere.”

BenchPrep for Libraries is a comprehensive online test-preparation platform for the top GED, civil, military and educational tests. BenchPrep can be accessed on computers and iPhone, Android and iPad devices. Courses include material from top education publishers, including McGraw-Hill.

BenchPrep offers adaptive learning that adjusts to the user’s learning style. BenchPrep courses typically comprise lessons, flash cards, practice tests, full tests, study planners, game centers and progress reports.

BenchPrep courses include GED, Firefighter Exam Prep, Nursing School Entrance Strategies, AP Chemistry, LSAT Prep and Praxis I Prep.

“We’re thrilled to expand our digital offerings with the addition of BenchPrep,” said Rich Freese, Recorded Books president and CEO. “This will be a great resource for students and adults aspiring to improve test scores and build professional careers.”
