

BULLETIN: Black Men Listen

A CULTURAL BULLETIN aimed at young Black men; especially those who've accumulated significant riches or wealth [i.e., NBA PLAYERS, NFL PLAYERS, MLB PLAYERS, OTHER SPORTS PLAYERS, ENTERTAINERS, ACTORS, BUSINESS MEN, ENTREPRENEURS, DOCTORS, LAWYERS, HEIRS, etc.] – if we can't effectively build intellectual and financial wealth through other auspicious-determined Black men – who've the aptitude, fitness and liberty to further leverage that wealth through other less fortunate Black men, particularly in ways wherein the strategy becomes cyclical – then Black men – due to uncountable inequities entrenched in a disproportionate global free enterprise, legal and social justice systems – we'd ultimately become casualties of our own lack of astute collective foresight. Black women in the United States are more united, more formerly educated than Black men in the United States, which means more future opportunities will likely be available to them via the same systems of oppression that both Black men and women have faced in previous decades. Black men ARE URGED to invest in people, businesses and ideas that are going to help keep them liberated [implying morally, financially and socially well] rather than ideas ingeniously designed to systematically force them apart. In closing, this is not a message of division given the dire circumstances of Black men, but one of perpetual unity – and through a strong desire for independence, this bulletin champions the preservation of existence for all good humanity. Be BOLD, resolute and unapologetic toward leveling an unlevel playing field.
