

Ancillary Information

If the buyer is a foreign entity, then that entity, or its agent, or its representative, must be unconfined in its capacity to do business with the United States and/or a U.S. citizen. This is particularly concerning if a prospective buyer or their representative contacts the seller for direct negotiations. The seller will pursue all reasonable means to verify the buyer or the buyer's representative(s) status prior to finalizing any pending sales transaction. Likewise, any direct negotiations will require the services of a U.S. attorney or law firm at the buyer's expense, and that such attorney and/or firm shall be disciplined in the fields of intellectual property law, international law, and U.S. tax law. Such a requirement protects the interests of both the seller and the buyer. The buyer shall be responsible for all applicable taxes. The following law firm (Dentons) may be of interest to both the seller and the buyer in such matters.

Apart from information already provided to build out the ATSATN idea, the seller may or may not agree to work as a paid consultant if the buyer seeks his or her assistance. Likewise, other than provisional business planning currently available on this website, the seller will work from mental notes. However, if the purchaser is willing to pay for comprehensive business planning from a reputable company that provides such services, then Business Plan Consulting may be of interest to such buyer(s). Escrow/dot/com would be the preferred service provider to administer and/or transact a final sale pending mutual agreement between the seller and the buyer(s). Sales & use taxes may apply.

Although the emerging brand "all things STUPID about the news" (ATSATN) is not a registered trademark at the USPTO, common law rights currently provide sufficient legal protection along with transnational inexorable copyright law. Further, the formation of the name is unique and will ultimately lead back to its founder, Mr. John C. Sudds.
