The Investment in Shit Analysis: How Various Ethnic Groups Are Largely Investing Their Currencies

White people are largely invested in White people's shit and Asian countries' shit. Although the continent of Africa may be the exception for China, Far East Asian people are largely invested in Far East Asia, South Asia, and White people's shit. South Asian people are largely invested in South Asia, White people's shit, and Far East Asia's shit. Latinos and Hispanic people are largely invested in Latin America and Spanish countries, as well as White people's shit, Far East Asia's shit, and South Asia's shit. Yet again, although the continent of Africa may be the exception, Middle Eastern people are largely invested in the Middle East, West Asia, White people's shit, Far East Asia's shit, and South Asia's shit.

On the far end of that spectrum, there are Black people (including African Americans). Black people are largely invested in everybody else's shit except their own ideas and businesses. Therefore, due to the rationale that Black people are heavily invested in everybody else's shit, as a result, Black people have unwisely predisposed themselves to conditions that often run counter to their own best interests and corporeal needs. Including any variations of a microcosm of things as personal as when to go take a lunch break on the job. Or when a Black person's employer denies them a promotion because clandestine racism and biases had been at the center of their employer's decision-making. Needless to say, there are always aggressive, concerted efforts to keep Black people from investing in Black people's shit. Hence, Black people's ownership of any abundance of critical infrastructure, land, invaluable materials, and/or service-related shit will always be at a relatively low level because collectively, Black people fail to properly value their own self-worth, ideas, and shit—and/or, as GULLIBLE consumers, pour enormous amounts of money into shit that Black people can neither exploit nor leverage to their own advantage.

All things considered—Black people, when are we going to have the courage to invest in our own shit? Therein lies Black people's incredible superpower.