

How Did Trump Regain Access to the White House and What Has Been the Upshots of That Reality and Material Fact?

The Trump campaign, buttressed by an overwhelmingly large segment of panicky, gullible, ignorant, racist, and White power-blind voting majority (MAGA), as well as, by comparison, a low percent of minorities whose SHEER ignorance of the EVIL and ANGRY VINDICTIVE Trump and his Administration was about to unleash on America's democracy—BRUTALLY lied, bullied, and acquired with hundreds of millions of dollars, for which lots of those perimeter funding sources were unknown—has exemplified a U.S. president and administration that literally bought its way into America's White House. By the way, a White House that was built by slaves. Unfortunately, Trump sleeps among the horrifically abused and disquieted spirits of African slaves.

Needless to say, the Trump Administration is impregnated with a patriarchy of arrogant White men who many Black Americans believe harbor and peddle fascist and/or racist views about African Americans, other minorities, and marginalized groups (including women), notwithstanding what part of the planet they may live on.

Further, it has not been a far stretch for many Black Americans to ponder over the idea that if the Trump Administration could reinstitute "America's Failed State of Slavery" and reestablish the Confederacy (were the political and social climates conducive to the reestablishment), it would not hesitate to put Negroes under the worst kind of oppression the Administration could muster. That's the astonishing paradigm shift America has undergone since the reelection of a very ANGRY and VINDICTIVE Donald J. Trump.

Black people in general have come to terms with the notion that Trump has an exceedingly low tolerance for highly educated, uppity Negroes. Therefore, the following:

Perhaps among many Black intellectuals, professionals, and common people alike, it's believed that the semblance of Trump's conspicuous contempt, hatred, and anger toward African Americans and Black people was plausibly triggered by the failed murder attempt on his life in 2024, as well as the mirage of highly intelligent and sophisticated Negro attorneys who "apparently" humiliated him before the world, which, as a result, contributed to America's judicial system awarding the reelected Trump with a convicted felon status. Hence, the fierce and unbridled attacks on affirmative action, DEI, and the whitewashing of African American history.

And lastly, that old adage that says, "elections have consequences" clearly applies to America in this moment and time. Likewise, it appears that in many respects, Americans have either contextualized or quickly realized that in the reelection of Donald J. Trump, the country has made one of the dumbest mistakes of its entire history. Perhaps the only silver lining in it all (provided that Trump doesn't get America into a nuclear war where we are all obliterated) is that Trump only has four years in office, and members of his administration as well as those of a petrified U.S. Congress will eventually have to confront the toxic political fallout that the Trump Administration, his henchman, and goons have left behind.

P.S. For African American golfers, MLB, NBA, NFL, and tennis players, and/or any sport that I did not mention but you're an influential part of, perhaps you're aware of the inquisitions and reality that one of the Trump Administration's core objectives, particularly under the auspices of DOGE and other hidden initiatives, is to eradicate the Black political power structure and Black wealth. Thus, you and your riches may not be materially immune to those political aspirations. Please get involved in ways that are powerful and meaningful. Particularly, ways that will send America and the world a powerful message that you won't stand idly by and not pull your weight to help remedy things. I would be remiss not to reiterate any conventional wisdom that you are under a spiritual jurisdiction, covenant, and undertaking of Luke 12:48. You are not merely sports figures. Your riches have been provided for a reason. Please don't squander it.

Likewise, I wish LeBron James and Stephen A. Smith would hug, defuse their beef, and redirect all of that intellectual energy toward one of the most difficult political anomalies our country is faced with today, the ongoing dismantling of its democracy and the emasculation of African Americans and Black people in America.

Created By: John C. Sudds

Date: 3/30/2025