Vital small intestinal villi, boosts immune system & activates rejuvenation (stem cells)

Our digestive system is so much more than just absorbing nutrients and eliminating waste. Did you know:

- that over 70% of people have a 'leaky gut' to a greater or lesser extent. This allows 'toxins to enter the bloodstream' directly. This is now even occurring in young children.
- These toxins can cross the blood-brain barrier & cause inflammation in the brain. That is why leaky gut = leaky brain.
- The vagus nerve, which runs from our brain to the intestines and other organs, transmits 90% of signals from the intestines to the brain and only 10% in the opposite direction. Consequently, the microbes, and possibly parasites and fungi, in our intestines determine what we eat! Not us humans.
- The tiny villi (the finger-like projections in the intestinal wall) are the cradle of stem cells. A gluten allergy is an indication that these villi are damaged. Less well known is that this also limits the production of stem cells.
- Stem cells are the 'regenerative cells'. Poor gut function therefore leads to accelerated ageing & other related issues.
- A healthy microbial balance in the gut determines the quality of our immune system, but as mentioned above, also our cognitive function and stamina.
- Our gut feeling helps us tell the difference between what is good for us and what isn't. If we can't do that, we run the risk of being misled. To lead a successful life, we need to be capable to discern to make the better decisions.

In short: The vitality of your gut determines your vitality and the quality of your life.
