

Strong Disapproval of Russian Domination of Strategic Passage Appears Likely.

Washington, Aug. 13.-(A)-The United States appeared likely tonight to oppose strongly a Russian plan for revolutionizing control of the Dardanelles so that the strategic passage between the Black sea and the Mediterranean would become a Soviet-dominated waterway.

The Russian government sent a note proposing the change to Turkey and to the United States and Britain a few days ago. Ofgicials here left little doubt that this country would stand firm on a policy laid down by Secretary of State Byrnes last November which would bar the Soviet Union from establishing military bases in the straits on what is now Turkish territory.

Diplomats expect that the controversy thus beginning over control of the Dardanelles-a longtime objective of Russian foreign policy -will go on for months and prove another serious issue between the western powers and the government at Moscow.

"Between Russia and Turkey." At a news conference today, Undersecretary of State Acheson took up the Dardanelles question very briefly. He said it is one between the Russian and Turkish governments in its present phase and that he would get in hot water if he said that the United States had or had not been informed. However, from other sources it was learned that this government almost certainly will stand firm with Turkey in opposing any Russian demands which it considers excessive. The Russian note which reached Washington was dated August 7two days before the expiration of the period fixed for demanding changes in the Montreux convention which now governs the straits.

Gives Turkey Control. This treaty, with certain restrictions, gives Turkey general control of the important waterway particularly in time of war. The Russians feel that Turkey, which has always been close to Britain, is standing astride their best sea passage to the outside world.

The issue has come up in various big power conferences, particularly at the Big Three meeting at Potsdam a year ago. At that time President Truman, Prime Minister Attlee and Premier Stalin decided that each of their governments would separately propose to Turkey changes in the status of itself to be an excellent material the Dardanelles. MacArthur Commended.

To General Douglas MacArthur, heading Japanese occupation forces, went a message from Secretary of War Patterson congratulating him on "your great contribution to the magnificent victory achieved and your outstanding accomplishments in the past year to bring about a lasting peace.

MacArthur withheld his recapitulation of the results of a year's guidance of the island empire's affairs until the anniversary of the actual surrender signing aboard the battleship Missouri, September 2.

VJ-day's anniversary found the general Japanese attitude as one of gratification that the country is more peaceful and better off physically than was expected a year ago. Mr. Truman, in his victory day proclamation, urged the people of America to commemorate "the devotion of the men and women by whose sacrifices victory was achieved.'

He asked that it be a day "of prayer and of high resolve that the cause of justice, freedom, peace and international good will shall be advanced with undiminished and
