

Hello Family

It's two years today since Glenis/Mum/Grandma passed away. I still have many reflective moments which are tinged with predictable sadness. Then these times are mollified by memories of the great life we shared (even with its ups and some awful downs) and especially the last 21 years together at the beach, with reminders etched in every corner of the house & dunes. In so many ways she is still here. But don't be sorry for me as these quiet times always end with a smile on my face. She was such a good mate. A song for Glenis:

<https://youtu.be/ito5ELbvyxs> (Skip the Youtube ads!).

And here is an image of Glenis's shrine which I maintain on the dining room sideboard with flowers in season from her shrub garden (my jungle!). I love her photo (which I took many years back) because of the knowing expression clearly displayed in her eyes. (Zoom in on the image & focus on her eyes as you move your head quickly from left to right or vice versa - her eyes follow you!). She knew me to a "T". I sit on the table chair facing her photo every morning when I'm having breakfast. And I grin back at her image. I find it's a good way to start each day & places everything in perspective & in a positive light.

Love

Dad/Bill/Grandad

22 November 2024