

History 101, The 2020 Revolution, - “Not about Guns” Sept 2022.

The revolution of June 2020, was generally speaking without violence.

Yes, there were a few hundred gun owners that resisted, and the NRA would likely have underlined the fact that it was only because the forces of law & order had much more gun power, that they were finally disarmed, or just got themselves killed.

The fact that these were dyed in wool, card carrying members, might have explained why there were a marked lack of FB postings and Tweets on the subject.

However, to fully understand the ways and wherefores of this historic event, it is necessary to delve back into the past.

Quite soon after the end of the second world war, a certain Aaron Braunstein, found sanctuary in the welcoming arms of the United States of America.

What the U.S. government was blissfully unaware of, was that this German Jew, was in fact a highly appreciated collaborator of the Nazi regime.

And that he had brought with him quite a packet of currency to start his new life wife.

His first act was to change his family name to Brown, and his second was to buy himself into the highest American circles.

However, it is about his son, Albert, to which we must turn our attention.

Albert was a brilliant economist, graduating Phi Beta Kappa from Boston University.

With his father’s business and political connections, it didn’t take him long to integrate himself into the right-wing government machine.

Although brilliant, he was also painfully shy, and preferred to remain in the background.

Being quite a withdrawn child, one of his favourite pastimes was parlour magic, sleight of hand. He totally loved fooling people.

And it was this unusual, yet powerful combination that created the political reality of America as most people perceived it.

With the unintentional help of the FDA and the gun lobby, he succeeded to create a smokescreen, so powerful that even people looking directly at the functioning of the country, failed to see it.

In fact, the Americas had, without official declaration become, once again a 'colony'.

And the regular man and woman had been reduced to little more than poorly paid and poorly looked after slaves.

In truth, many black, southern slaves had better conditions and health provisions than a vast majority of 'free' US citizens, just before the revolution of 2019.

Slowly, over many years, the 1percent, the richest in the land had become the owners of the remaining 99 percent.

However, to keep the population confused, they would wait for yet another major act of violence, and immediately excite vast swathes of simple but loyal Americans, with calls to protect their country, to protect the 2nd amendment.

For them, this is a call to hold onto their arms, to protect themselves to guarantee "the security of a free State, the right of the people to keep and bear Arms, shall not be infringed."

Hence, they would create an enormous debate about the right to keep guns. Making sure to never fundamentally change anything, hence guaranteeing that this will continue to surface once every few years.

With this keeping most people's attention, the money barons continue to enslave the masses with more and more taxes and less and less rights.

Of course they reinforce the people's rights to carry guns, Albert 'Brown', had created the ultimate sleight of hand.

The common people believe that they are protecting themselves against Congress from legislating away a state's right to self-defense, - with guns.

While, Congress has been removing state's and individual's rights for over fifty years.

Sure, keep your gun, but don't react when we steal away your; schooling, health service, veteran's allowance, protection against unreasonable mortgage foreclosure, unemployment assurance.

Hell no! You have your gun, you can protect yourself against all the desperate, starving, sick people, that we are creating.

But don't for one moment look to your government and their wealthy backers and ask how they are stealing away your most basic freedoms.

However, the growing student protests of 2018 starting awakening people to illogic and un-defendable positions of many of the politicians.

They finally began to ask the right questions and to find much more reasonable solutions to current problems.

By developing small, high powered dart guns, that fired a strong dye which also created very painful muscle cramps, both the women's groups and the gun industry quickly moved to support the total ban on the carrying of a loaded fire arm in any public place.

Which coincided with the instituting that carrying a loaded gun, by anyone other than recognised police or security officer, would be considered as a federal offence with immediate loss of liberty.

The new house arrest bracelet, programmed to shock anyone that disrespected their sentence, has meant that all offenders, at little or no cost to the system, have been removed from the streets.

However, the major part of the revolution was not to do with that.

The banks were overrun, and all the wealth of the nation was blocked from leaving the country.

An interim government was set into place to redistribute the wealth, back to the people who had worked to earn it in the first place.

From here, we can see that Albert's real fear would be that the people realised that their power was not military, but political.

Which is where the slogan; 'stop shooting bullets and start shooting votes', came from.

We can all thank the brave students and their supporters for changing our country and going us back our freedom and our dignity.
