California Rap Radar: SpenDoe x Mozzy - Omertà [Single]

Santa Cruz, California rap artist SpenDoe has appeared alongside Oak Park Sacramento, California rap artist Mozzy. The track "Omertà" released by Money Goonz Muzik has been heating up the underground, continuously being listened to across multiple music platforms. The production on this song is handled by Oak Park, Sacramento native and Mobb Muzik rapper/producer "C-DUBB".

Both SpenDoe & Mozzy sound like a perfect fit on the haunting, and heavy hitting mob slap! The California artist's rap about situations where people depart from "Omertà" which is a code of silence. Mozzy raps "I heard homeboy's snitching/n*ggas snitching on snitches" and SpenDoe comes in on the 2nd verse rapping "It's really no room for fake cats, they tried/Caught red-handed with they hands on the pie...". A wicked tale of survival, street life, getting crossed up, and the consequences that come of breaking the code.

"Omertà" seems to be the main topic of discussion here. SpenDoe share's the chorus with Mozzy hollering out "Omertà be the code, I don't care how they feeling..."

The thought process, and lyrics are so vivid, one could literally picture a music video or mini-movie to such a song.

SpenDoe & Mozzy can also be heard on "Some Typa Way" off SpenDoe's "Surviving The Mob Era" album. While both artists hail from different areas of California, one thing remains clear; the streets are the streets, no matter where you go. You don't have to be from the same place to understand how thing's go. Give "Omertà" a listen today, as it surely won't disappoint.
