Summer 2021

It's been a strange old year, but here we are moving on from the pandemic with restrictions being lifted. With this good news, we want to share what we've been doing at Vivomotion.

Spending time with Mhairi prompted me to think about finding data and how to tailor it to my audience as well as how to create maximum impact with my designs.

Online Training

We were lucky that our training workshops on the visual presentation of research continued online. Various testimonials have helped us ascertain that this method of interactive training is still effective.

Visualise Your Thesis

We provided customised training for PhD students at The Universities of Glasgow and Newcastle for the 'Visualise Your Thesis' competition run by the University of Melbourne. This is an international competition that challenges researchers to develop an audio-visual presentation to present their research in 1 minute only, for a general audience. Good luck to those who took part!

Animations

Below are stills from animations we have recently completed. First, a collaboration with Dr. Anu Pallipurath & Dr. Claire Hobday to create an educational piece about the construction of The Ewald Sphere for their outreach work with The British Crystallographic Society.

Secondly, we made an animation for Dr. Iain Oswald from The University of Strathclyde to describe his research in developing novel technologies to produce pharmaceuticals. The animation will be used for his outreach work.

Finally, as members of the Dundee and Angus Chamber of Commerce we were delighted to animate their newly designed logo in order to help with the launch of their new website and brand. An exciting project highlighting the diverse business sectors in our region. Click here to see animation.

Thanks to our creative team who have worked on these projects; animators Dan Thompson & Fraser Murdoch, illustrator Andrew Torrens and voiceover artists Hannah Visocchi & Charlotte Thompson.
