

Sam's Spill

There are so many possible ways for an FFA member to really get involved in the organization. Last week, the chapter went to The Kentucky State Fair. Here several members competed at the State level in different areas. Competitions have been by far the most intriguing part of the FFA organization to me. I'm always amazed at how hard high school, younger, or older students are willing to work at something that could possibly not be successful. In my FFA career I've competed in junior and senior parliamentary procedure, livestock judging, record keeping, impromptu speaking, prepared speaking, and done several presentations.

Just the word competition stresses people out, it does me. Sometimes there are so many guidelines, time limits, and pressure put on a competition that it may not be fun anymore. This has happened to me more than once, I've taken the fun out of my work because I'm stressed. I was so afraid of the idea of not winning and failing, yet, this is when I have learned the most about myself and my peers. On my own I have realized that the outcome of the competition is not what defines my project or me and in team events we have grown together in success and failures. Sometimes we win, sometimes we lose. I have grown so much since my freshman year and I owe a lot to the competitions in FFA that have taken me out of my comfort zone, helped me be self-disciplined, made me a better leader, and taught me time management.
