Sadie's Scoop

Did you know that organizations like FFA keep kids creative? Well, the last week of September is National Keep Kids Creative Week.

Fleming County High School has an amazing ag program and teachers. Each and every day, members of the FFA are finding new and exciting ways to participate in agriculture.

For example, FFA members are eligible to participate in competitions, LDE's, and CDE's like livestock judging, public speaking, and welding. Also, the ag program at FCHS is open to any student taking an ag class. In these classes, students can learn more about the animals that are at the barn like horses, sheep, and poultry. In addition to these classes; students must participate in an SAE or supervised agricultural experience. With this, students are to come up with a project that shows their real world skills being used. These projects can be anything from growing soybeans to showing cattle. Participating in FFA, 4-H and other agricultural activities keeps students creative. With the amazing programs and teachers at our schools; students are able to be challenged enough to where they can get creative with their agricultural projects each and every day. Sometime, find
